

Bundesbank-IAW Lecture on European Economic Integration: The United States of Europe

Monday, 11 July 2022, 6 pm – Alte Aula, University of Tübingen

Thierry Mayer
Professor of Economics, Sciences Po, Paris

Thierry Mayer is among the most frequently-cited economists in the field of international trade and multinational production. His work is published in the world's best scholarly journals of economics, and he is an Associate Editor of the Journal of International Economics. He is a leading expert in the economics of the Single Market of the EU. For instance, he has coauthored an influential study on "The Cost of Non-Europe", published in the 2019-issue of Economic Policy. As a scientific advisor of CEPII, the leading French center for research and expertise on the world economy, Thierry Mayer has also been influential in constructing some of the most widely used data sets in international trade.

The Bundesbank-IAW Lecture on European Economic Integration invites leading experts in economics to present their research results on the future direction of the European economy.
